

March 18-19, 2009
Mandarin Oriental Hotel
Washington, D.C.

Gurinder Nihal

Country Head, Global Transaction Services
Royal Bank of Scotland
Moscow, Russia

Gurinder Nihal is Head of The Royal Bank of Scotland's (RBS) Global Transaction Services (GTS) business for Russia. He has held this position since January 2007, having joined ABN Amro (now RBS) specifically to take over the role.

As the GTS head for Russia, Mr Nihal is responsible for running the cash management / payments, liquidity, cards and trade finance lines of business. His objective has been to build RBS's GTS proposition in Russia and the region as a whole, and to ensure that the bank is recognised by clients and the marketplace as a prominent industry leader.

Prior to joining RBS in Russia, Mr Nihal held various banking and business roles in a career spanning 14 years in London, New York and New Delhi in corporate, consumer and private banking.

He holds an MBA from Boston University and a BA in economics from the University of Delhi.

Presented by

In cooperation with

Economist Intelligence Unit

The Economist